Correlates are examined within a multidimensional framework that considers both the characteristics of adolescents and the key systems - family, peer, school and neighbourhood - in which adolescents are embedded. Marianne Mordre, Berit Groholt, Ellen Kjelsberg, Berit Sandstad and Anne Margrethe Myhre, The impact of ADHD and conduct disorder in childhood on adult delinquency: A 30 years follow-up study using official crime records, BMC Psychiatry, 11, 1, (2011). Selection effects were found for impulsive/irresponsible traits, but these traits did not moderate peer influence on delinquency. Conclusions: As the first study to look at moderating effects of psychopathic traits on peer influence, this study advances knowledge about peer influence on delinquency and about psychopathic traits in adolescents. In addition, the study contributes to the literature by looking at unique effects of the three dimensions of psychopathy and taking a peer network ...
