Alliances and geopolitics. Using the ecological triad framework of the Sprouts, and Starr's 'opportunity and willingness' framework, alliances are viewed as part of the geopolitical constraints on available possibilities in the system, as part of the set of incentive structures that affect foreign policy decision-making,...The geopolitics of container shipping alliances. More recently, the European Commission also accepted the merger of market leader Maersk and Hamburg Sud, under certain conditions. These precedents will limit the possibilities of the Commission to stop mergers that it likes much less, e.g. COSCO taking over a European carrier. The US will soon overtake Saudi Arabia as the world's largest producer of crude oil, liberating its foreign policy from dependancy on a handful of oil-rich Arab allies. With America no longer standing so firmly behind its old alliances, the Arab Middle East is simultaneously excited and terrified. geopolitics. Interestingly, today's power politics is shifting away from the use of military force to the formulation of alliances. Similarities and continuities of international players' policies are reminiscent of the historical great game of empires. The changing trends in the post-Cold
